TALK ABOUT THIS

WEEK 1: Your teen might wonder how Jesus could love us so much that He was willing to die for us. Try talking to your teen about someone in their life who they would be willing to sacrifice something for. Talk about the limits to their sacrifice. Remind them that Jesus' sacrifice was unlimited. He literally gave everything.

WEEK 2: As followers of Jesus, our love for each other is an example to the world around us. Talk to your teen about someone they're having a difficult time with at school, on a sports team, or at church. Let them talk through the situation, and then help them identify ways they can show love to that person this week.

WEEK 3: We can trust who God is, even when we don't understand. Your teen might be asking why bad things happen to good people. This is a great chance to talk to your teen about Jesus trusting God's plan to save the whole world, even though it would cost His life. Discuss how God might be able to use sin and the brokenness in the world to show His love for people.

WEEK 4: When it comes to following Jesus, one of the most difficult things to grasp is that we live in response to God's love for us, but not to earn His love for us. Share with your teen about something you started doing or want to start doing in response to how God has shown His love to you. Then, ask your teen how they've seen God show His love for them and how they can respond to that love.

WEEK 5: Christ's death and resurrection was the sacrifice that paid the price for our salvation once and for all. Still, oftentimes it's easy for us to get caught up in trying to earn or deserve God's love through our actions. Talk to your teen about a time that you felt God's love for you, even though you knew your actions hadn't earned it. Remember to share something that's age appropriate.

REMEMBER THIS

"By this everyone will know that you are my disciples, if you love one another."

John 13:35 NIV

DO THIS

MORNING TIME

We've all felt that morning rush when we've hit the snooze button one too many times. Your teenager feels it, too! The next time they wake up a little sluggish (okay, just pick any morning), prep something quick and convenient for them to eat before they leave or eat on the go. Let them know that you didn't want them to leave without breakfast to help get them going!

MEAL TIME

Every student has a subject or a teacher at school that's difficult for them to figure out. Over dinner, talk to your teen about the thing they're struggling with the most at school right now and how they're getting through it. Encourage them to push through and to look forward to the end of the semester, when they can celebrate accomplishing something they maybe didn't think was possible.

THEIR TIME

Does your teen play video games? Love a sport you don't understand? Or listen to music you don't quite get? Jump into their world and ask them to teach you the video game, explain the sport, or share some music with you. Take an interest in their hobby with no judgment, just engagement.

BED TIME

Everyone enjoys a good movie—parents and teenagers included! Pick a night that no one has to get up early the next morning and do a movie night with your teen. Give them room to select (or maybe compromise) on the movie and the snacks. Let them drive the planning.
